

I'd like to offer comment regarding telemarketing calls. I for one am glad that states regulate telemarketers. To get calls, sometimes 10-15 per day gets annoying. Since Indiana has regulated these calls, (at my request) I have not gotten one call and would like it to stay that way. I don't believe I should have to pay for "privacy management" again when my elected officials are doing it already with my tax dollars. To change states laws at the whims of a few would not be an accurate representation of the many people I know that enjoy not having these annoying calls everyday. Please, do not take away individual states abilities to regulate and do allow states to continue to do what they're doing. Thank you.
